

Paragon
Brand Services

01/05

REBRAND KILLER 3 OF 5

The Making Good Trap.

The spiralling budget.

Removing the old brand is never a simple patch job.
This is the cost nobody budgets for.

Picture this →

Paragon
Brand Services

02/05

THE MAKING GOOD TRAP · THE ILLUSION

One sign down. One sign up.

A 20-letter name comes off the reception wall. A three-letter one goes up in its place. Simple, on paper.

What's left behind →

Paragon
Brand Services

03/05

THE MAKING GOOD TRAP · THE REALITY

Ghosting. Drill holes. A wall that no longer matches.

The new sign doesn't cover the old footprint. To make it look right, the whole wall, and often the whole room, has to be repainted.

The bill →

Paragon
Brand Services

04/05

THE MAKING GOOD TRAP • THE COST

5 figures

for one unbudgeted sign swap.

A simple removal spirals into a remediation job.
Now multiply that across every reception, every site, every country.

The way out →

Paragon
Brand Services

05/05

THE MAKING GOOD TRAP · THE WAY OUT

Scope making good as its own line item.

When a long name is being replaced by a shorter one, design the new sign with a built-in back panel sized to the old footprint from day one. A small decision early that avoids a large one later.

Three traps down. Two to go in The Execution Gap.

Read the white paper. Link in the post →