

Paragon
Brand Services

01/05

REBRAND KILLER 4 OF 5

The Local Nuance Trap.

When creative meets reality.

A design that works on a screen in London can become a liability, or an impossibility, somewhere else.

Three examples →

Paragon
Brand Services

02/05

THE LOCAL NUANCE TRAP · SECURITY

Vehicle branding that comes off at night.

In parts of South America and Africa, fleet branding has to be magnetic. Drivers remove it after hours to avoid being targeted as a valuable international company.

Next: theft →

Paragon
Brand Services

03/05

THE LOCAL NUANCE TRAP • THEFT

A metal sign, gone in days.

In certain regions of Asia an expensive metal sign is stolen and melted for scrap within days of installation. The answer: a visually identical, materially worthless alternative.

Next: compliance →

Paragon
Brand Services

04/05

THE LOCAL NUANCE TRAP · COMPLIANCE

A sign that confuses the shipping lanes.

An illuminated sign near a major port like Genoa can interfere with navigation signals and the colours of buoys. That needs a separate approval with the maritime authorities, not just the city.

The way out →

THE LOCAL NUANCE TRAP • THE WAY OUT

Local knowledge before manufacture.

Work with a partner that has on-the-ground teams in every key market. Their local knowledge surfaces these nuances before production begins, which protects the budget and preserves the brand's integrity.

Four traps down. One to go in The Execution Gap.

Read the white paper. Link in the post →